

Contents

| | | |
|----------|--|-----------|
| 1 | Synchrotron radiation instrumentation | 1 |
| | G.N. GREAVES and C.R.A. CATLOW | |
| 1.1 | Introduction | 1 |
| 1.2 | Synchrotron radiation sources | 6 |
| 1.2.1 | Collimation, intensity and polarisation | 6 |
| 1.2.2 | Brilliance and time structure | 8 |
| 1.2.3 | Insertion devices | 10 |
| 1.3 | Mirror optics | 13 |
| 1.3.1 | Total external reflection | 13 |
| 1.3.2 | Toroids and cylinders | 15 |
| 1.3.3 | Filters and windows | 16 |
| 1.3.4 | Multilayers | 16 |
| 1.4 | Monochromators | 17 |
| 1.4.1 | Crystal monochromators | 17 |
| 1.4.2 | Grating monochromators | 24 |
| 1.5 | Detectors | 27 |
| 1.5.1 | Low energy resolution detectors | 27 |
| 1.5.2 | Detectors with high energy resolution | 30 |
| 1.5.3 | Photoelectron analysers | 31 |
| 1.5.4 | Multidetectors | 31 |
| 1.6 | Experimental layouts | 33 |
| 1.6.1 | X-ray absorption spectroscopy | 34 |
| 1.6.2 | X-ray diffraction | 35 |
| 1.6.3 | UV photoemission | 36 |
| 1.7 | Conclusion | 37 |
| | References | 37 |
| 2 | X-ray diffraction from powders and crystallites | 39 |
| | C.R.A. CATLOW | |
| 2.1 | Introduction | 39 |
| 2.2 | X-ray diffraction: basic features | 39 |
| 2.3 | Synchrotron radiation and powder diffraction | 42 |
| 2.4 | Instrumentation | 44 |
| 2.4.1 | Angle dispersive scans | 45 |
| 2.4.2 | Energy dispersive studies | 48 |
| 2.5 | Applications | 50 |
| 2.5.1 | High resolution powder diffraction | 51 |
| 2.5.2 | Time-resolved (or kinetic) crystallography | 54 |
| 2.5.3 | High pressure studies | 55 |
| 2.5.4 | Anomalous dispersion studies | 59 |
| 2.5.5 | Studies of surface films | 61 |
| 2.6 | Single crystal studies | 62 |
| 2.6.1 | Microcrystalline diffraction | 62 |
| 2.6.2 | Laue methodologies | 63 |

| | |
|---|------------|
| 2.7 Summary and conclusion | 63 |
| References | 63 |
| 3 X-ray topography | 65 |
| J. MILTAT and M. DUDLEY | |
| 3.1 Introduction | 65 |
| 3.2 Dispersion and absorption according to the dynamical theory of X-ray diffraction: an overview | 68 |
| 3.3 Topographic techniques and contrast formation mechanisms | 73 |
| 3.3.1 Integrated intensity techniques | 73 |
| 3.3.2 Pseudo plane wave techniques | 77 |
| 3.4 Crystal growth defects | 78 |
| 3.5 Dislocation analysis: integrated intensity techniques | 80 |
| 3.6 Dislocation analysis and strain mapping: plane wave imaging | 84 |
| 3.7 From the analysis of one-dimensional strains to the precise location of impurity atoms | 87 |
| 3.8 Applications of X-ray topography to the study of solid state reactions | 90 |
| 3.9 Conclusion | 96 |
| References | 97 |
| 4 Small angle X-ray scattering and the study of microemulsions | 100 |
| H.C. GERRITSEN and C. ROBERTUS | |
| 4.1 Introduction | 100 |
| 4.2 SAXS hardware requirements | 102 |
| 4.2.1 Monochromator | 103 |
| 4.2.2 Collimation | 104 |
| 4.3 Experiments on AOT microemulsions | 106 |
| 4.3.1 High angle limit | 108 |
| 4.3.2 Scattering from practical systems | 112 |
| References | 119 |
| 5 Time-resolved small angle X-ray scattering on polymers | 121 |
| G. UNGAR | |
| 5.1 Introduction | 121 |
| 5.2 SAXS and polymers | 122 |
| 5.3 Time-resolved SAXS in polymer crystallisation and annealing | 124 |
| 5.4 Model polymers: ultra-long n -alkanes | 127 |
| 5.5 Phase separation in liquid polymer mixtures | 133 |
| 5.6 Simultaneous diffraction and calorimetry experiments | 134 |
| References | 139 |
| 6 EXAFS and structural studies of glasses | 140 |
| S.J. GURMAN | |
| 6.1 Introduction | 140 |
| 6.2 Basic principles of EXAFS | 141 |
| 6.2.1 The EXAFS function | 143 |
| 6.2.2 Structural information in EXAFS | 147 |
| 6.3 EXAFS data analysis | 149 |

| | | |
|--------------------------------|--|------------|
| 6.3.1 | Real space analysis | 149 |
| 6.3.2 | k -space analysis | 151 |
| 6.4 | The structure of oxide glasses | 155 |
| 6.4.1 | Network modifiers in silicate glasses | 157 |
| 6.4.2 | Intermediates in silicate glasses | 161 |
| 6.4.3 | Alkali germanate glasses | 163 |
| 6.4.4 | Corrosion studies of silicate glasses | 166 |
| References | | 169 |
| 7 | EXAFS studies of ionically conducting solids | 171 |
| A.V. CHADWICK | | |
| 7.1 | Introduction | 171 |
| 7.2 | Ionic conductivity in solids | 171 |
| 7.3 | Silver iodide | 175 |
| 7.4 | Rare-earth doped alkaline earth fluorides | 178 |
| 7.5 | Cubic stabilised zirconia and bismuth oxide | 184 |
| 7.5.1 | Cubic stabilised ZrO ₂ | 184 |
| 7.5.2 | Rare-earth doped bismuth oxide | 188 |
| 7.6 | Mixed fluorides | 191 |
| 7.7 | Polymer electrolytes | 192 |
| 7.8 | Summary | 196 |
| References | | 197 |
| 8 | Applications of EXAFS to the study of metal catalysts | 201 |
| J. EVANS | | |
| 8.1 | Introduction | 201 |
| 8.2 | Sampling methods | 202 |
| 8.3 | Homogeneous transition metal catalysts | 202 |
| 8.4 | Surface organometallic species | 205 |
| 8.5 | Oxide supported metal ion sites | 208 |
| 8.6 | Oxide supported metallic catalysts | 210 |
| 8.7 | Oxide supported alloy catalysts | 215 |
| 8.8 | Concluding comments | 217 |
| References | | 218 |
| 9 | Looking at solid surfaces with synchrotron radiation | 221 |
| D. NORMAN and D.A. KING | | |
| 9.1 | Introduction | 221 |
| 9.2 | Surface science: the tools | 221 |
| 9.3 | Advantages of the synchrotron source | 222 |
| 9.4 | Photoemission | 223 |
| 9.4.1 | Valence level photoemission | 223 |
| 9.4.2 | Angle resolved photoemission | 226 |
| 9.4.3 | Core level photoemission | 228 |
| 9.5 | X-ray absorption spectroscopy | 233 |
| 9.5.1 | Surface EXAFS | 233 |
| 9.5.2 | X-ray standing waves | 236 |
| 9.5.3 | NEXAFS | 237 |
| 9.6 | X-ray diffraction from surfaces | 238 |
| References | | 240 |

| | |
|--|------------|
| 10 Protein crystallography | 241 |
| I.D. GLOVER and J.R. HELLIWELL | |
| 10.1 Introduction | 241 |
| 10.2 Instrumentation for protein crystallography | 241 |
| 10.2.1 X-ray optics | 242 |
| 10.2.2 Detectors | 243 |
| 10.3 Use of the high intensity and collimation of synchrotron radiation in protein crystallography | 245 |
| 10.3.1 Fundamentals of the protein crystallographic technique | 245 |
| 10.3.2 Reduction of radiation damage | 246 |
| 10.3.3 Large unit cells: virus crystallography | 247 |
| 10.3.4 Small sample volume | 250 |
| 10.4 Anomalous scattering and phase determination | 250 |
| 10.4.1 Multiple wavelength anomalous diffraction methods | 253 |
| 10.5 Time-resolved crystallography | 255 |
| 10.5.1 Laue crystallography | 256 |
| 10.5.2 Time-resolved studies of the phosphorylase enzyme | 258 |
| 10.5.3 Structural transitions in insulin | 259 |
| 10.5.4 100 ps data collection | 260 |
| 10.6 Synchrotron radiation and diffuse scattering from protein crystals | 260 |
| 10.7 Conclusions and future directions | 264 |
| References | 265 |
| 11 X-ray absorption spectroscopy of biological molecules | 268 |
| C.D. GARNER | |
| 11.1 Introduction | 268 |
| 11.2 Experimental aspects | 268 |
| 11.3 Information content of an X-ray absorption spectrum | 270 |
| 11.3.1 The position of an absorption edge | 270 |
| 11.3.2 Pre-edge and/or edge features | 271 |
| 11.3.3 XANES and EXAFS | 271 |
| 11.4 Applications | 272 |
| 11.4.1 Metallothioneins | 273 |
| 11.4.2 Zinc centres in proteins | 274 |
| 11.4.3 Manganese in photosystem II | 275 |
| 11.4.4 Oxomolybdoenzymes | 276 |
| 11.4.5 Molybdenum nitrogenases | 278 |
| 11.4.6 Vanadoenzymes | 279 |
| 11.5 XAS and protein crystallography | 280 |
| References | 280 |
| 12 X-ray microscopy | 283 |
| P.J. DUKE | |
| 12.1 Introduction | 283 |
| 12.2 X-ray optical systems | 284 |
| 12.3 Methods of zone plate fabrication | 287 |
| 12.4 X-ray microscope designs | 289 |
| 12.4.1 Source brilliance | 289 |
| 12.4.2 Monochromators | 290 |
| 12.4.3 Scanning versus fixed beam arrangements | 290 |

| | |
|---|----------------|
| 12.5 Applications of X-ray focussing microscopes | 293 |
| 12.5.1 X-ray contrast | 295 |
| 12.5.2 Time-dependent imaging | 300 |
| 12.6 Contact X-ray microscopy | 302 |
| 12.6.1 Geometrical considerations | 302 |
| 12.6.2 Photoresist | 303 |
| 12.6.3 Applications | 305 |
| 12.7 Future developments | 305 |
| 12.7.1 Sources and optics | 305 |
| 12.7.2 Phase contrast and holographic microscopy | 307 |
| 12.8 Conclusion | 308 |
| References | 308 |
| 13 Synchrotron radiation trace element analysis | 311 |
| R.D. VIS | |
| 13.1 Introduction | 311 |
| 13.2 The development of accelerator-based techniques | 312 |
| 13.3 The use of synchrotron radiation | 313 |
| 13.3.1 The sensitivity of SXRF | 314 |
| 13.3.2 The detection limits of SXRF | 316 |
| 13.3.3 Radiation damage | 320 |
| 13.3.4 Concentration assignment using SXRF | 320 |
| 13.4 Applications of synchrotron X-ray fluorescence | 322 |
| 13.5 Total reflection | 323 |
| 13.6 Spatial resolved SXRF | 324 |
| 13.6.1 The focussing of X-rays | 324 |
| 13.6.2 Experimental work with synchrotron micropores | 326 |
| 13.7 Conclusions | 329 |
| References | 330 |
| 14 Atomic and molecular science | 333 |
| J.B. WEST | |
| 14.1 Introduction | 333 |
| 14.2 Photo-electron spectroscopy | 334 |
| 14.3 Photo-ion spectroscopy | 345 |
| 14.4 Fluorescence spectroscopy | 352 |
| 14.5 Conclusion | 358 |
| References | 359 |
| 15 Time-resolved spectroscopy | 361 |
| Y.K. LEVINE and H. VAN LANGEN | |
| 15.1 Introduction | 361 |
| 15.2 Principles of fluorescence polarisation | 364 |
| 15.2.1 General expressions | 364 |
| 15.2.2 Membrane systems | 367 |
| 15.2.3 Excitation with horizontally polarised light | 372 |
| 15.2.4 Determination of $F(t)$ | 372 |
| 15.3 Experimental methods and instrumentation | 373 |
| 15.3.1 The single photon counting method | 373 |
| 15.3.2 Experimental set-up and methods | 373 |

| | | |
|--------|-------------------------------|-----|
| 15.4 | Numerical analysis | 375 |
| 15.5 | Results | 378 |
| 15.5.1 | The initial anisotropy $r(0)$ | 378 |
| 15.5.2 | The orientational order | 379 |
| 15.5.3 | Reorientational dynamics | 381 |
| 15.6 | The future | 381 |
| | References | 382 |