CONTENTS

SUMMARY, CONCLUSIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS	5
Role of INTOR in the fusion programme	5
INTOR concept	6
Operation schedule for INTOR	9
Alternatives	13
4.1. Materials testing	13
4.2. Tritium production	15
4.3. Electricity production	16
Physics and technology data bases and R and D needs	17
5.1. Physics	18
5.2. Magnetics and power supply	20
5.3. Blanket and tritium	21
5.4. Engineering	23
5.5. Safety and environment	24
Schedule and resources	25
Conclusions	25
Recommendations	26
DATA BASE AND R AND D NEEDS ASSESSMENTS, INTOR SUGGESTED
PARAMETERS AND ELECTRICITY PRODUCTION	27
PARAMETERS AND ELECTRICITY PRODUCTION	27 27
PARAMETERS AND ELECTRICITY PRODUCTION Introduction Data base assessment summaries	27 27 27
PARAMETERS AND ELECTRICITY PRODUCTION Introduction Data base assessment summaries	27 27 27 27
PARAMETERS AND ELECTRICITY PRODUCTION Introduction Data base assessment summaries 2.1. Energy and particle confinement 2.2. Impurity control, fueling and exhaust	27 27 27 27 27 29
PARAMETERS AND ELECTRICITY PRODUCTION Introduction Data base assessment summaries 2.1. Energy and particle confinement 2.2. Impurity control, fueling and exhaust 2.3. Heating	27 27 27 27 27 29 32
PARAMETERS AND ELECTRICITY PRODUCTION Introduction Data base assessment summaries 2.1. Energy and particle confinement 2.2. Impurity control, fueling and exhaust 2.3. Heating 2.4. Stability control	27 27 27 27 29 32 35
PARAMETERS AND ELECTRICITY PRODUCTION Introduction Data base assessment summaries 2.1. Energy and particle confinement 2.2. Impurity control, fueling and exhaust 2.3. Heating 2.4. Stability control 2.5. Start-up, burn and shut-down control	 27 27 27 27 29 32 35 36
PARAMETERS AND ELECTRICITY PRODUCTION Introduction Data base assessment summaries 2.1. Energy and particle confinement 2.2. Impurity control, fueling and exhaust 2.3. Heating 2.4. Stability control 2.5. Start-up, burn and shut-down control 2.6. Magnetics	27 27 27 29 32 35 36 38
PARAMETERS AND ELECTRICITY PRODUCTION Introduction Data base assessment summaries 2.1. Energy and particle confinement 2.2. Impurity control, fueling and exhaust 2.3. Heating 2.4. Stability control 2.5. Start-up, burn and shut-down control 2.6. Magnetics 2.7. Power supply and transfer	27 27 27 29 32 35 36 38 42
PARAMETERS AND ELECTRICITY PRODUCTION Introduction Data base assessment summaries 2.1. Energy and particle confinement 2.2. Impurity control, fueling and exhaust 2.3. Heating 2.4. Stability control 2.5. Start-up, burn and shut-down control 2.6. Magnetics 2.7. Power supply and transfer 2.8. First wall, blanket and shield	 27 27 27 29 32 35 36 38 42 42
PARAMETERS AND ELECTRICITY PRODUCTION Introduction Data base assessment summaries 2.1. Energy and particle confinement 2.2. Impurity control, fueling and exhaust 2.3. Heating 2.4. Stability control 2.5. Start-up, burn and shut-down control 2.6. Magnetics 2.7. Power supply and transfer 2.8. First wall, blanket and shield 2.9. Tritium	 27 27 27 29 32 35 36 38 42 42 43
PARAMETERS AND ELECTRICITY PRODUCTION Introduction Data base assessment summaries 2.1. Energy and particle confinement 2.2. Impurity control, fueling and exhaust 2.3. Heating 2.4. Stability control 2.5. Start-up, burn and shut-down control 2.6. Magnetics 2.7. Power supply and transfer 2.8. First wall, blanket and shield 2.9. Tritium 2.10. Materials	 27 27 27 29 32 35 36 38 42 42 43 45
PARAMETERS AND ELECTRICITY PRODUCTION Introduction Data base assessment summaries 2.1. Energy and particle confinement 2.2. Impurity control, fueling and exhaust 2.3. Heating 2.4. Stability control 2.5. Start-up, burn and shut-down control 2.6. Magnetics 2.7. Power supply and transfer 2.8. First wall, blanket and shield 2.9. Tritium 2.10. Materials 2.11. Systems integration and support structure	 27 27 27 29 32 35 36 38 42 42 43 45 47
PARAMETERS AND ELECTRICITY PRODUCTION Introduction Data base assessment summaries 2.1. Energy and particle confinement 2.2. Impurity control, fueling and exhaust 2.3. Heating 2.4. Stability control 2.5. Start-up, burn and shut-down control 2.6. Magnetics 2.7. Power supply and transfer 2.8. First wall, blanket and shield 2.9. Tritium 2.10. Materials 2.11. Systems integration and support structure 2.12. Assembly and remote maintenance	 27 27 27 29 32 35 36 38 42 42 43 45 47 49
PARAMETERS AND ELECTRICITY PRODUCTION Introduction Data base assessment summaries 2.1. Energy and particle confinement 2.2. Impurity control, fueling and exhaust 2.3. Heating 2.4. Stability control 2.5. Start-up, burn and shut-down control 2.6. Magnetics 2.7. Power supply and transfer 2.8. First wall, blanket and shield 2.9. Tritium 2.10. Materials 2.11. Systems integration and support structure 2.12. Assembly and remote maintenance 2.13. Shielding and personnel access	 27 27 27 27 29 32 35 36 38 42 42 43 45 47 49 50
PARAMETERS AND ELECTRICITY PRODUCTION Introduction Data base assessment summaries 2.1. Energy and particle confinement 2.2. Impurity control, fueling and exhaust 2.3. Heating 2.4. Stability control 2.5. Start-up, burn and shut-down control 2.6. Magnetics 2.7. Power supply and transfer 2.8. First wall, blanket and shield 2.9. Tritium 2.10. Materials 2.11. Systems integration and support structure 2.12. Assembly and remote maintenance 2.13. Shielding and personnel access 2.14. Vacuum	 27 27 27 27 29 32 35 36 38 42 42 43 45 47 49 50 52
PARAMETERS AND ELECTRICITY PRODUCTION Introduction Data base assessment summaries 2.1. Energy and particle confinement 2.2. Impurity control, fueling and exhaust 2.3. Heating 2.4. Stability control 2.5. Start-up, burn and shut-down control 2.6. Magnetics 2.7. Power supply and transfer 2.8. First wall, blanket and shield 2.9. Tritium 2.10. Materials 2.11. Systems integration and support structure 2.12. Assembly and remote maintenance 2.13. Shielding and personnel access 2.14. Vacuum 2.15. Diagnostics, data acquisition and control	 27 27 27 27 29 32 35 36 38 42 42 43 45 47 49 50 52 53
	INTOR concept Operation schedule for INTOR

3	R and D needs assessment
	3.1. R and D needs assessment – energy and particle confinement
	3.2. R and D needs assessment – impurity control, fueling and exhaust
	3.3(a). R and D needs assessment – heating – neutral beam
	3.3(b), R and D needs assessment – heating – RF
	34 R and D needs assessment – stability control
	3.5 R and D needs assessment — start-up burn and shut-down control
	3.6 R and D needs assessment - magnetics
	37 R and D needs assessment – nower supply and transfer
	3.8 R and D needs assessment - first wall blanket and shield
	3.9 R and D needs assessment — tritium
	3.10 R and D needs assessment - materials
	3.11 R and D needs assessment - materials
	3.12 P and D needs assessment — systems integration and support structure
	3.12. R and D needs assessment shielding and personnal access
	2.14 P and D needs assessment – sincluing and personnel access
	2.15 P and D needs assessment discreption data acquisition and control
	2.16 B and D needs assessment – diagnostics, data acquisition and control
4	5.10. K and D needs assessment – safety and environment
4.	The statistic and location
э.	Electricity production
	5.1. Production of 10 Mw _e
	5.2. Production of 100 MW _e
	5.3. Production of net electrical power
IV.	ENERGY AND PARTICLE CONFINEMENT
1.	Experimental status of confinement in tokamaks
	1.1. Confinement in ohmically-heated tokamaks
	1.1.1. Energy confinement
	1.1.2. Particle confinement
	1.1.3. Impurity confinement
	1.2. Confinement in tokamaks with strong auxiliary heating
	1.2.1. Neutral beam heating results on PLT
	1.2.2. Neutral beam heating results on ISX-B
	1.2.3. Neutral beam heating results on T-11
	1.2.4. Neutral beam heating results from other tokamaks
	1.3. Recommended INTOR-relevant confinement experiments
	1.4. Summary – Applicability to INTOR
2.	Point-model studies of INTOR
	2.1. Ignition requirements on energy confinement time
	2.2. Ignition requirements on plasma beta
	2.3. Neutron wall loading
	2.4 Heating nower needed for ignition
3	Computational studies of INTOR using transport codes	1
5.	3.1 Reference transport model	1
	2.2 Variations of the reference transport model	1
	5.2. variations of the reference transport model
	2.2 Particle transport
	3.3. Particle transport
	 3.3. Particle transport 3.4. Requirements for heating to ignition 2.4.1 Provide the second sec	1

			3.4.3. Power and particle outflux to wall and limiter	106
eds assessment	57		3.4.4. Impurity effects on heating to ignition	106
nd D needs assessment – energy and particle confinement	57		3.5. Burn pulse scenarios	111
nd D needs assessment – impurity control, fueling and exhaust	58	4.	Other transport processes	112
nd D needs assessment – heating – neutral beam	59		4.1. Field ripple	112
nd D needs assessment – heating – RF	60		4.1.1. General discussion and recommendations	112
nd D needs assessment – stability control	61		4.1.2. Effect on suprathermal ions	114
d D needs assessment – start-up, burn and shut-down control	62		4.2. Alpha-particle confinement	115
d D needs assessment – magnetics	63		4.3. Synchrotron radiation	118
d D needs assessment – power supply and transfer	64	5.	R and D needs assessment	118
d D needs assessment – first wall, blanket and shield	65	6.	Summary	118
d D needs assessment – tritium	66	Ref	erences to Chapter IV	120
d D needs assessment – materials	67
d D needs assessment – systems integration and support structure	68	v .	IMPURITY CONTROL, FUELING AND EXHAUST	121
d D needs assessment – assembly and remote maintenance	68
d D needs assessment – shielding and personnel access	69	1.	Outline of plasma-wall interaction, impurity control, and exhaust in INTOR	121
d D needs assessment – vacuum	70		1.1. Burn time	121
D needs assessment – diagnostics, data acquisition and control	71		1.2. Requirements for ash exhaust	121
1 D needs assessment – safety and environment			1.3. Plasma contamination by impurities sorbed on the wall surface	122
ested narameters	73		1.4. Plasma contamination by first-wall materials	123
roduction	80		1.5. Roles of a divertor	124
ion of 10 MW	81 ·		1.6. Particle and heat fluxes at the plasma boundary	124
ion of 100 MW	82		1.7. Erosion of the first wall	125
ion of not electrical news	82	2.	Permissible levels of impurities	127
	85	3.	Experimental results on plasma-wall interaction	129
	05		3.1. Impurity production	129
ND PARTICLE CONFINEMENT	85		3.2. Recycling of plasma particles	131
l status of confinement in tokamaks	85	4.	Some specific means for decreasing plasma contamination	132
ment in ohmically-heated tokamaks	85		4.1. Wall conditioning to reduce absorbed and adsorbed impurities	132
Energy confinement	85		4.1.1. Surface treatment before assembly	132
Particle confinement	87		4.1.2. Wall conditioning after assembly	132
Impurity confinement			4.2. Low-Z first wall	133
ement in tokamaks with strong auxiliary heating			4.3. Impurity transport control	134
Neutral beam heating results on PI T	90	5	Divertors for impurity control and ash exhaust	135
Neutral beam heating results on ISX-B	92	5.	5.1 Divertor functions and exhaust requirements	135
Neutral beam heating results on T-11	03		5.1.1 Porticle exhaust	135
Neutral beam heating results from other tokamake	95		5.1.7. Energy exhaust	135
mended INTOP-relevant confinement experiments	94		5.1.2. Energy exhaust minimum mi	138
ry - Applicability to INTOP	94		5.1.5. Impulling of unburnt fuel from the divertor to the torus	138 studies of INTOP	95		5.2 Results of divertor experiments	130
requirements on energy confinement time	96		5.2.1 Poloidal divertor	130
a requirements on plasma hate	96		5.2.1. Foldar divertor	1/1
n requirements on plasma dela	90		5.2.2. During unvertion	141 1/1
a wall loading	97		5.3.1 Deloided divertor	142
power needed for ignition	99		5.3.1. Foloidal divertor and its improvements	142
al studies of INTOK using transport codes	100		5.5.2. Bundle divertor and its improvements	143
ce transport model	100		5.5.5. Hydrid divertor	148
ns of the reference transport model	101		5.3.4. Branch (or poloidal bundle) divertor	150 transport	103	6.	Non-divertor case for impurity control and ash exhaust	151
ements for heating to ignition	104		6.1. Ports for ash exhaust adjacent to toroidal limiters	152
Beam power, energy, and pulse length needed	104		6.2. "Wall Lapping Plasma" with rotating resonant helical islands and mechanical
Beam penetration	105		valves for ash exhaust	154

	6.3. Helium exhaust at a limiter consisting of a stream of small balls			A 16.2 Deliability
΄.	Fueling	154		4.10.5. Reflating	•••••
	7.1. Gas puffing	155		4.10.4. Reduildancy	•••••
	7.2. Pellet injection	155	_	4.17. Innovative power supply requirements	•••••
	7.2.1. Current experimental programme		5.	Summary of research and development needs for neutral-beam heating and
	7.2.2. Injection requirements for INTOR	156		technology	•••••
5.	R and D needs assessment			5.1. Needs prior to INTOR authorization – major development requirements	•••••
)	Summary	159		5.2. Needs prior to INTOR operation	•••••
Ref	erences to Chapter V		6.	Physics and technology of radio-frequency heating	•••••
				6.1. Summary assessment for RF heating in INTOR	••••••
/I.	HEATING	163		6.2. Electron cyclotron heating (ECH)	••••••
	Turkens Jacobi	162		6.2.1. Theoretical considerations	••••••
•	Introduction			6.2.2. Technological considerations	·····)
	1.1. Objectives			6.2.3. ECH proposals for INTOR
	1.2. Possible heating methods for a tokamak reactor plasma			6.3. Lower hybrid heating (LHH)
•	Heating requirements for INTOK			6.3.1. Physics considerations
	2.1. Power levels			6.3.2. Technological considerations
	2.2. Pulse length			6.3.3. Lower hybrid heating proposals for INTOR
	2.2.1. Ignition scenario			6.4. Ion cyclotron range of frequencies (ICRF)	···· í
	2.2.2. Driven systems			6.4.1. Physics considerations	•••••
	2.3. Neutral-beam heating status related to INTOR			6.4.2. Technological considerations	•••••
	2.4. Radio-frequency heating status related to INTOR			6.4.3. ICRF proposals for INTOR	····· ′
•	Physics of neutral-beam injection		7.	Summary of research and development needs for radio-frequency heating
	3.1. Beam penetration			7.1. Physics research and development needs	••••••
	3.2. Fast-ion loss channels			7.2. Technology research and development needs	í
	3.2.1. Charge-exchange loss		8.	Summary	····· .
	3.2.2. Orbit loss			8.1. Summary of neutral-beam heating	·····
	3.2.3. Ripple loss			8.2. Summary of radio-frequency heating	····· í
	3.3. Microinstability effects		Re	ferences to Chapter VI	····· ′
	3.4. Preferred injection mode for INTOR
	3.5. Experimental status		VI	I. STABILITY CONTROL	í
i .	Neutral-beam technology
	4.1. Status of neutral-beam systems		1.	MHD stability limits on β	•••••
	4.2. Ion sources			1.1. Theoretical predictions	••••••
	4.3. Species mix			1.1.1. High-n, fixed boundary modes	•••••
	4.4. Direct energy recovery systems			1.1.2. Low-n modes	•••••
	4.5. Efficiencies of neutral-beam systems			1.1.3. Optimum profiles	•••••
	4.6. Negative-ion beams			1.2. Experimental status
	4.7. Long-pulse beam development			1.3. Conclusions	•••••
	4.8 Deliverable power density	183		1.4. R and D needs	•••••
	4.9 Effects of neutron environment	184	2.	Disruptions	•••••
	4 10 Reamline numping system	186		2.1. Disruptions in present-day machines
	4.11 Cas influx from injectors	187		2.2. Extrapolation to INTOR	•••••
	7.11. Gas IIIIUX 110111 IIIJOCOUS	107		2.3. Conclusions
	4.12 Magnetic shielding			2.4. R and D needs
	4.15. Magnetic sineling		3.	Equilibrium and stability control
	4.14. The injector cooling system			3.1. Control of position and shape
	4.15. Initium injection			3.2. Control of the scrape-off layer of a divertor
	4.16. Availability, maintenance and reliability			3.3. Control of the current profile
	4.16.1. Availability			3.4. Induced time dependence of the wall loading
	4.16.2. Maintenance

154	4 16 3 Reliability	190
1.)-1	4.16.4 Dedundancy	190
155	4.17 Innovative nower supply requirements	100
155	4.17. Innovative power supply requirements	190
155	5. Summary of research and development needs for neutral-beam nearing and	101
156	technology	101
157	5.1. Needs prior to INTOR automization – major development requirements	191
159	5.2. Needs prior to INTOR operation	193
161	6. Physics and technology of radio-trequency heating	193
	6.1. Summary assessment for RF heating in INTOR	193
63	6.2. Electron cyclotron heating (ECH)	195
(2)	6.2.1. Theoretical considerations	195
63	6.2.2. Technological considerations	197
63	6.2.3. ECH proposals for INTOR	197
63	6.3. Lower hybrid heating (LHH)	199
65	6.3.1. Physics considerations	199
65	6.3.2. Technological considerations	203
65	6.3.3. Lower hybrid heating proposals for INTOR	203
65	6.4. Ion cyclotron range of frequencies (ICRF)	206
65	6.4.1. Physics considerations	206
66	6.4.2. Technological considerations	209
66	6.4.3. ICRF proposals for INTOR	210
.67	7. Summary of research and development needs for radio-frequency heating	210
67	7.1. Physics research and development needs	210
69	7.2. Technology research and development needs	212
69	8. Summary	215
69	8.1 Summary of neutral-beam heating	215
70	8.2 Summary of radio-frequency heating	216
70	D.2. Summary of Julie requires neuring meaning
	References to Chapter VI
70	References to Chapter VI	217
70 72	References to Chapter VI VII STABILITY CONTROL	217
170 172 176	VII. STABILITY CONTROL	217
70 72 76 76	References to Chapter VI VII. STABILITY CONTROL 1. MHD stability limits on β	217 219 219
70 72 76 76 76	 References to Chapter V1 VII. STABILITY CONTROL 1. MHD stability limits on β 1.1. Theoretical predictions 	217 219 219 219
70 72 76 76 76 77	 References to Chapter V1 VII. STABILITY CONTROL 1. MHD stability limits on β 1.1. Theoretical predictions 1.1.1. High-n, fixed boundary modes 	217 219 219 219 219
70 72 76 76 76 77 77	 References to Chapter V1 VII. STABILITY CONTROL 1. MHD stability limits on β 1.1. Theoretical predictions 1.1.1. High-n, fixed boundary modes 1.1.2. Low-n modes 	217 219 219 219 219 220
70 72 76 76 76 77 77 77	 References to Chapter V1 VII. STABILITY CONTROL 1. MHD stability limits on β 1.1. Theoretical predictions 1.1.1. High-n, fixed boundary modes 1.1.2. Low-n modes 1.1.3. Optimum profiles 	217 219 219 219 219 219 220 222
170 172 176 176 176 176 177 177 177	 References to Chapter V1 VII. STABILITY CONTROL 1. MHD stability limits on β	217 219 219 219 219 220 222 223
170 172 176 176 176 176 177 177 177 181	 References to Chapter V1 VII. STABILITY CONTROL 1. MHD stability limits on β	217 219 219 219 219 220 222 223 223
170 172 176 176 176 176 177 177 177 181 182	 References to Chapter V1 VII. STABILITY CONTROL 1. MHD stability limits on β	217 219 219 219 219 220 222 223 223 224
170 172 176 176 176 177 177 177 181 182 183	 References to Chapter V1 VII. STABILITY CONTROL 1. MHD stability limits on β 1.1. Theoretical predictions 1.1.1. High-n, fixed boundary modes 1.1.2. Low-n modes 1.1.3. Optimum profiles 1.2. Experimental status 1.3. Conclusions 1.4. R and D needs 2. Disruptions 	217 219 219 219 219 220 222 223 223 224 224
170 172 176 176 176 177 177 177 181 182 183 184	 References to Chapter V1 VII. STABILITY CONTROL 1. MHD stability limits on β 1.1. Theoretical predictions 1.1.1. High-n, fixed boundary modes 1.1.2. Low-n modes 1.1.3. Optimum profiles 1.2. Experimental status 1.3. Conclusions 1.4. R and D needs 2. Disruptions 2.1. Disruptions in present-day machines 	217 219 219 219 219 220 222 223 223 224 224 224
70 72 76 76 76 76 77 77 77 79 81 82 83 84 84	 Kererences to Chapter V1 VII. STABILITY CONTROL 1. MHD stability limits on β 1.1. Theoretical predictions 1.1.1. High-n, fixed boundary modes 1.1.2. Low-n modes 1.1.3. Optimum profiles 1.2. Experimental status 1.3. Conclusions 1.4. R and D needs 2. Disruptions 2.1. Disruptions in present-day machines 2.2. Extrabolation to INTOR 	217 219 219 219 219 220 222 223 223 224 224 224 224
70 72 76 76 76 77 77 77 79 81 82 83 84 86 87	Kererences to Chapter V1 VII. STABILITY CONTROL 1. MHD stability limits on β 1.1. Theoretical predictions 1.1.1. High-n, fixed boundary modes 1.1.2. Low-n modes 1.1.3. Optimum profiles 1.2. Experimental status 1.3. Conclusions 1.4. R and D needs 2. Disruptions 2.1. Disruptions in present-day machines 2.2. Extrapolation to INTOR 2.3. Conclusions
70 72 76 76 76 77 77 77 79 81 82 83 84 88 84 86 87 87	Kererences to Chapter V1 VII. STABILITY CONTROL 1. MHD stability limits on β 1.1. Theoretical predictions 1.1.1. High-n, fixed boundary modes 1.1.2. Low-n modes 1.1.3. Optimum profiles 1.2. Experimental status 1.3. Conclusions 1.4. R and D needs 2. Disruptions 2.1. Disruptions in present-day machines 2.2. Extrapolation to INTOR 2.3. Conclusions 2.4. R and D needs
70 72 76 76 76 77 77 79 81 82 83 84 88 84 86 87 87 88	Kererences to Chapter V1 VII. STABILITY CONTROL 1. MHD stability limits on β 1.1. Theoretical predictions 1.1.1. High-n, fixed boundary modes 1.1.2. Low-n modes 1.1.3. Optimum profiles 1.2. Experimental status 1.3. Conclusions 1.4. R and D needs 2. Disruptions 2.1. Disruptions in present-day machines 2.2. Extrapolation to INTOR 2.3. Conclusions 2.4. R and D needs
70 72 76 76 77 77 77 79 81 82 83 84 83 84 86 87 87 88 88 88	 References to Chapter V1 VII. STABILITY CONTROL 1. MHD stability limits on β 1.1. Theoretical predictions 1.1.1. High-n, fixed boundary modes 1.1.2. Low-n modes 1.1.3. Optimum profiles 1.2. Experimental status 1.3. Conclusions 1.4. R and D needs 2. Disruptions in present-day machines 2.2. Extrapolation to INTOR 2.3. Conclusions 2.4. R and D needs 3. Conclusions 3. Conclusions
170 172 176 176 176 177 177 179 181 182 183 184 186 187 188 188 188 188	 References to Chapter V1 VII. STABILITY CONTROL 1. MHD stability limits on β 1.1. Theoretical predictions 1.1.1. High-n, fixed boundary modes 1.1.2. Low-n modes 1.1.3. Optimum profiles 1.2. Experimental status 1.3. Conclusions 1.4. R and D needs 2. Disruptions in present-day machines 2.2. Extrapolation to INTOR 2.3. Conclusions 2.4. R and D needs 3. Conclusions 3.1. Control of position and shape 3.2. Control of the scrape of flaver of a divertor
170 172 176 176 176 177 177 177 179 181 182 183 184 186 187 188 188 188 188 188	 References to Chapter V1 VII. STABILITY CONTROL 1. MHD stability limits on β 1.1. Theoretical predictions 1.1.1. High-n, fixed boundary modes 1.1.2. Low-n modes 1.1.3. Optimum profiles 1.2. Experimental status 1.3. Conclusions 1.4. R and D needs 2. Disruptions 2.1. Disruptions in present-day machines 2.2. Extrapolation to INTOR 2.3. Conclusions 2.4. R and D needs 3. Equilibrium and stability control 3.1. Control of position and shape 3.2. Control of the scrape-off layer of a divertor
70 72 76 76 76 77 77 79 81 82 83 84 83 84 86 87 87 88 88 88 89 89 89	Kererences to Chapter V1 VII. STABILITY CONTROL 1. MHD stability limits on β 1.1. Theoretical predictions 1.1. Theoretical predictions 1.1.1. High-n, fixed boundary modes 1.1.2. Low-n modes 1.1.3. Optimum profiles 1.2. Experimental status 1.3. Conclusions 1.4. R and D needs 2. Disruptions 2.1. Disruptions in present-day machines 2.2. Extrapolation to INTOR 2.3. Conclusions 2.4. R and D needs 3.5. Equilibrium and stability control 3.6. Conclusions 3.7. Control of position and shape 3.8. Control of the scrape-off layer of a divertor 3.9. Control of the current profile
70 72 76 76 77 77 79 81 82 83 84 83 84 86 87 87 88 88 89 89 89 89	References to Chapter V1 VII. STABILITY CONTROL 1. MHD stability limits on β 1.1. Theoretical predictions 1.1. Theoretical predictions 1.1.1. High-n, fixed boundary modes 1.1.2. Low-n modes 1.1.3. Optimum profiles 1.2. Experimental status 1.3. Conclusions 1.4. R and D needs 2.1. Disruptions 2.1. Disruptions in present-day machines 2.2. Extrapolation to INTOR 2.3. Conclusions 2.4. R and D needs 3. Equilibrium and stability control 3.1. Control of position and shape 3.2. Control of the scrape-off layer of a divertor 3.3. Control of the current profile 3.4. Induced time dependence of the wall loading

4.	Summary	233	3.3.4. Maintenance provisions	•••••
5.	R and D needs assessment	236	3.3.5. Disruptions	••••
Re	ferences to Chapter VII	236	3.3.6. Design guidelines	••••
			3.4. Development programmes
VI	II. START-UP, BURN AND SHUT-DOWN	237	4. Induction coils
1	Start up	227	4.1. Description
1.	1.1 Duild up of the tokemak configuration		4.2. Trade-off considerations
	1.1. Build-up of the tokamak configuration		4.2.1. Superconductor
	1.2. Onmic and auxiliary heating		4.2.2. Operating field
	1.2.1. Current rise and onmic heating		4.2.3. Losses
	1.2.2. Auxiliary heating and fuelling to ignition		4.2.4. Cooling methods
	1.2.3. Problem areas		4.2.5. Winding methods
2.	The burn phase		4.2.6. Cabling methods
	2.1. Duration of burn		427 Insulation
	2.2. Control of burn temperature	249	4.2.8 Structure	••••
	2.2.1. Field ripple	249	4.2.0 Current	••••
	2.2.2. β limits		4.2.7. Cultent	••••
	2.2.3. Compression – decompression		4.5. Machine Interaction	••••
	2.2.4. Fuelling	252	4.3.1. Helium vessel and structure	••••
	2.2.5. Subignition operation	252	4.3.2. Retrigerator	••••
	2.2.6 Other methods assessed	253	4.3.3. Power supplies	••••
	2.2.7 Reactor relevance of hurn temperature control methods	253	4.3.4. Intercoil coupling	••••
3	Shut-down		4.4. Technology assessment: present and expected	••••
5.	2.1 Initiation of shut down		4.5. Development programmes	••••
	2.2. Oraline and execution 1		5. Shaping and control coils	••••
	3.2. Cooling and current run-down		5.1. Description
4.	Non-inductive current drive	257	5.2. Trade-off considerations
5.	Conclusions		5.3. Machine interactions
6.	R and D needs assessment		5.4. Technology assessment	:
7.	Summary	260	6. Plasma initiation
Re	ferences to Chapter VIII		7. Technology assessment of divertors for the INTOR mission
			7.1. Introduction
IX.	MAGNETICS		7.2 Description	••••
1	Introduction	265	7.2. Description	••••
1. 2	Summary		7.5. Hade-off considerations	••••
۷.	2.1. Contents		7.4. Machine Interaction	••••
	2.1. Contents		7.5. Technology assessment	••••
	2.2. IF coll		7.5.1. Current experimental divertors	••••
	2.3. Induction coil		7.5.2. Current INTOR-relevant studies	••••
	2.4. Shaping and control coils		7.5.3. Relative feasibility of poloidal and bundle divertors for the
	2.5. Divertors		INTOR mission	••••
	2.6. R and D needs assessment		7.5.4. Materials requirements	••••
3.	Toroidal field system	268	7.6. Development and technology programmes
	3.1. Description		7.6.1. Expectation of current divertor programmes	••••
	3.2. Trade-off considerations		7.6.2. Design studies needed
	3.2.1. Superconducting materials		7.6.3. Development programmes needed
	3.2.2. Stabilizer material (Cu versus Al)	269	References to Chapter IX
	3.2.3. Cooling mode	202
	3.3 Machine interaction		X. POWER SUPPLY AND TRANSFER
	3.3.1 Tolerable neutron exposure
	3.3.7 Dulsed noloidal field		1. Introduction	•••••
			2. The poloidal magnetic field system
	2.2.2 Toroidal field strongth	071	1

233	3.3.4. Maintenance provisions
255	3.3.5. Disruptions
236	3.3.6. Design guidelines
	3.4. Development programmes
227	4. Induction coils
	4.1. Description
	4.2. Trade-off considerations
	4.2.1. Superconductor	274
	4.2.2. Operating field	274
	423 Losses	275
243	4.2.4 Cooling methods	275
244	4.2.5. Winding methods	275
247	4.2.5. Winding methods
	4.2.7 Insulation
	4.2.7. Insulation
	4.2.0. Suuciuit
	4.2.7. Wiltell
	4.5. Machine interaction
	4.3.1. Henum vessel and structure
252	4.3.2. Retrigerator
	4.3.5. Power supplies
255	4.3.4. Intercoil coupling
255	4.4. Technology assessment: present and expected
255	4.5. Development programmes
255	5. Shaping and control coils
250	5.1. Description
251 757	5.2. Trade-off considerations
257	5.3. Machine interactions
260	5.4. Technology assessment
	6. Plasma initiation
	7. Technology assessment of divertors for the INTOR mission
245	7.1. Introduction
	7.2. Description
	7.3. Trade-off considerations
	7.4. Machine interaction	285
	7.5. Technology assessment	285
	7.5.1. Current experimental divertors	285
	7.5.2. Current INTOR-relevant studies
	7.5.3. Relative feasibility of poloidal and bundle divertors for the INTOR mission
	7.5.4. Materials requirements
	7.6. Development and technology programmes
268	7.6.1. Expectation of current divertor programmes
268	7.6.2. Design studies needed
268	7.6.3. Development programmes needed
200 260	References to Chapter IX
207 270
271	X. POWER SUPPLY AND TRANSFER	291
	1. Introduction
	2. The poloidal magnetic field system
//1

	2.1. All superconducting poloidal magnetic field coils outside the TF coils	6	Blan
	2.1.1. Coil arrangement	0.	6.1.
	2.1.2. System description of power supply		6.2
	2.2. Poloidal magnetic field coils which are not all superconducting		6.3
	2.2.1. All water-cooled copper coils		64
	2.2.2. A combination of superconducting coils and water-cooled	7	Desi
	copper coils	8	Desi
	2.2.3. Ohmic heating induction coil: part superconducting and part	9	Data
	liquid nitrogen cooled	10.	Desi
	2.2.4. A separate plasma initiation coil	11.	Desi
3.	Divertor		dive
	3.1. Poloidal divertor 296		11.
	3.2. Bundle divertor		11.
4.	Toroidal magnetic field coil supply		11.
5.	The neutral beam injection system	12.	Ra
	5.1. Power system	13.	Cor
	5.2. Neutral beam injector protection system	Refe	erend
6.	Radio-frequency heating power supplies
7.	Power for cooling	XII.	ТR
	7.1. Machine cooling
	7.2. Power for cryogenic refrigeration	1.	Int
	7.3. Neutral beam loss cooling power 299	2.	IN
8.	Electric power generation system	3.	Fu
9.	Alternative concepts		3.1
	9.1. Superconducting energy storage system		3.2
	9.2. High-frequency solid-state neutral beam power supplies		3.3
10.	R and D needs assessment		3.4
11.	Summary of power requirements and conclusions		3.5
Refe	erences to Chapter X		3.6
			-

XI.	FIRST WALL, BLANKET AND SHIELD		4.3. Lithium aluminate (LiAlO ₂)
1	Tata du sta		4.4. Lithium orthosilicate (Li_4SiO_4) and lithium metasilicate (Li_2SiO_4)
1.	Introduction		4.5. Tritium removal from ceramic materials
2.	Summary		4.6. Lithium alloys (LiAl, Li ₇ Pb ₂)
3.	INTOR guiding parameters		4.7. Summary
4.	Design choices and constraints	5.	Tritium material interaction
	4.1. Free choices	6.	Analytical techniques
	4.1.1. Generation of electricity		6.1. Methods used in inventory accounting
	4.1.2. Tritium breeding		6.1.1 Direct methods
	4.1.3. Staged operation		6.1.2 Inferential methods
	4.2. Limited choices		6.2 Detection in liquids and breeding materials
	4.3. Design constraints		6.2.1 A queque en encenia materiale
	4.4. Design examples		6.2.1. Aqueous of organic materials
5	Reference design and alternatives 212	_	6.2.2. Iritium in breeding compounds
5.	5.1 Deference design and internatives	7.	Tritium monitoring, cleanup and disposal
	5.1. Reference design		7.1. Tritium monitoring
	5.2. First alternative design		7.2. Tritium containment
	5.3. Second alternative		7.3. Atmosphere detritiation
•	5.4. Third alternative		7.4 Waste disposal
	5.5. Choice between alternatives

F coils	292	6. Blanket test facilities
	292	6.1. Test channels
	293	6.2. Test modules	316
	295	6.3 Test segments
	295	6.4. Other considerations
ed		7 Design concepts and data base assessment for the first wall	317
	295	9 Design concepts and data base assessment for the blanket	319
1 part		 Design concepts and data base assessment for the blanket life Data base assessment for first wall and blanket life 	322
- Fart	295	9. Data base assessment for first wan and blanket me shield structure	323
	295	11. Design concepts and data base assessment for limitars hear dumps and
	296	11. Design concepts and data base assessment for inities, beam dumps and diverter targets	324
•••••••••••••••••••••••••••••••••••••••	296	(IVERIOI Largers	324
•••••••••••••••••••••••••••••••••••••••	296	11.2 Deem dumme	276
••••••••	296	11.2. Beam dumps
••••••••••••••••••••••••	207	11.3. Divertor targets
•••••••	297	12. K and D requirements
••••••	297	13. Conclusions
	298	References to Chapter XI
••••••	298
••••••	299	XII. TRITIUM	333
	299	1 Introduction	333
•••••	299	2. INTOR tritium consumption and inventory	334
	299	2. INTOK tititum consumption and inventory	226
	300	3. Fuel recycle system	242
	300	3.1. Fuel purification
	300	3.2. Hydrogen isotope separation
	300	3.3. Storage
	301	3.4. Refueling	346
	302	3.5. Other technologies
		3.6. Safety
		4. Recovery of tritium from the blanket	347
		4.1. Liquid lithium	347
		4.2. Lithium oxide (Li_2O)	348
	305	4.3. Lithium aluminate (LiAlO ₂)	348
		4.4. Lithium orthosilicate (Li_4SiO_4) and lithium metasilicate (Li_2SiO_3)	349
	305	4.5. Tritium removal from ceramic materials	350
	306	4.6. Lithium alloys (LiAl, Li ₇ Pb ₂)	350
	307	4.7. Summary	350
	308	5. Tritium material interaction	353
•••••	308 👘	6. Analytical techniques	357
	308	6.1. Methods used in inventory accounting	357
	309	6.1.1. Direct methods	357
•••••••••••••••••••••••••••••••••••••••	310	6.1.2 Inferential methods
	310	6.2 Detection in liquids and breeding materials	350
••••••	311	6.2. Detection in inquites and orecume materials	350
		6.2.1. Aqueous of organic materials	250
	313	0.2.2. Intum in precung compounds
·····	314	7. Influm monitoring, cleanup and disposal
••••••	21/	/.1. Initium monitoring
	215	7.2. Tritium containment
••••••	313	7.3. Atmosphere detritiation
••••••	315	7.4. Waste disposal	363

8.	Tritium procurement, transport and safeguarde
9.	Conclusions			6.3. Electr
10.	R and D needs assessment			6.4. Stabil
Refe	rences to Chapter XII			6.5. Irradia
			7.	Irradiation
XIII.	MATERIALS		8.	Intaulation
1	Introduction			8.1. Introd
2	Data hase assessment for the transformer of the second sec			0.2. Assess
2.	2.1 Allows considered			8.2.1.
	2.1. Anoys considered			8 2 3
	3 Physical properties			824
	24 Fabrication			8 2 5
	25 Compatibility			8.3 Conch
	2.5.1 Water		0	Data base f
	2.5.1. Water		9.	9 1 Classif
	2.5.2. Herdin as a fusion reactor coolant			9.2 Neutro
2	6 Mechanical properties			9.3 Physic
2	7 Stress corresion			931
3. I	radiation effects on structure 1			9.4 Blister
3	1 Anticipated maximum neutral materials			9.5. Vapor
3	2. Swelling and machanical manual in the second sec		10.	Relevant co
3	3. Fatigue and fatigue grack grant (DSG)		11.	Overall con
3	4. Present and future data base formula		12.	R and D ne austenitic stainless steels		Ref	erences to Cl
3	5. Ferritic steels
3.	6. Titanium allovs	395	XIV	. SYSTEM
3.	7. Aluminium allovs
3.	8. Summary of data base		1.	Introductio
4. D	ata base for coolants	399		1.1. Conte
4.	1. Water as a fusion reactor coolant		2	T.2. Objec
4.	2. Helium as a fusion reactor coolant		2.	Design opti
4.	3. Summary	400		2.1. Altern
5. Da	ta base for tritium-breeding material	400		2.2. Vacuu
5.	. Candidate breeding materials	401		2.3. Refere
5.3	2. Physical properties of LipO	401		2.3.1.
	5.2.1. Preparation of sintered nellets	401		2.3.2.
	5.2.2. Vapour pressure	401		2.3.3.
	5.2.3. Thermal properties	402	2	2.3.4.
5.3	6. Chemical compatibility	402	3.	System into
	5.3.1. Lithium compatibility	402		3.1. The m
	5.3.2. Compatibility with solid compounds	402		3.2. Specif
	5.3.3. Reactivity with water	404	٨	Structure
	5.3.4. Compatibility of LipO with Fe Ni Cr allow	404	4.	A 1 Susta-
	5.3.5. Compatibility of Li ₂ O with molyhdomum	405	5	H.I. Syster
	5.3.6. Compatibility with commercial and a half	405	э. ∠	Design stan
5.4	. Tritium release due to a diffusion process	405	0. 7	Critical ice
6. Ma	gnet materials	408	/. Q	P and D
6.1	Introductory remarks and summary	409	o. 0	Summer:
6.2	Superinsulation	409	9. Ref	erences to Cl
			Kel	ciences to Cl

	6.3. Electrical insulators	412
	6.4. Stabilizer materials	412
	6.5. Irradiation effects on superconductors	417
	7. Irradiation effects on ceramics	419
	8. Irradiation effects on graphite
	8.1. Introduction	421
	8.2. Assessment
	8.2.1: Dimensional stability
	8.2.2. I hermal behaviour
	8.2.3. Mechanical behaviour
375	8.2.4. Further considerations	425
376	8.2.5. Chemical erosion effects
	8.3. Conclusions
	9. Data base for plasma-material interactions
	9.1. Classification of materials and their functional use
378	9.2. Neutron sputtering
	9.5. Physical sputtering – ions and neutrals
3/0	9.5.1. Experimental data base
	9.4. Blistering phenomenon
	9.5. vaporization oi wali materiais
um levels 385	10. Relevant coating technology	432
	11. Overall conclusions and observations for materials data with respect to INTOR	434
ets on	12. R and D needs assessment	438
202	References to Chapter XIII	438
592
205
	XIV. SYSTEMS INTEGRATION AND SUPPORT STRUCTURE	439
	XIV. SYSTEMS INTEGRATION AND SUPPORT STRUCTURE	439 439
	XIV. SYSTEMS INTEGRATION AND SUPPORT STRUCTURE 1. Introduction 1.1. Contents	439 439 439
	XIV. SYSTEMS INTEGRATION AND SUPPORT STRUCTURE 1. Introduction 1.1. Contents 1.2. Objectives	439 439 439 439
	 XIV. SYSTEMS INTEGRATION AND SUPPORT STRUCTURE 1. Introduction 1.1. Contents 1.2. Objectives 2. Design optimization considerations 	439 439 439 439 440
	 XIV. SYSTEMS INTEGRATION AND SUPPORT STRUCTURE 1. Introduction 1.1. Contents 2. Objectives 2. Design optimization considerations Alternative machine topologies 	439 439 439 439 440 440
	 XIV. SYSTEMS INTEGRATION AND SUPPORT STRUCTURE 1. Introduction 1.1. Contents 1.2. Objectives 2. Design optimization considerations 2.1. Alternative machine topologies 2.2. Vacuum/atmosphere boundary 	439 439 439 439 440 440 441
395 396 397 397 399 399 399 400 400	 XIV. SYSTEMS INTEGRATION AND SUPPORT STRUCTURE 1. Introduction 1.1. Contents 1.2. Objectives 2. Design optimization considerations 2.1. Alternative machine topologies 2.2. Vacuum/atmosphere boundary 2.3. Reference concepts 	439 439 439 439 440 440 441 443
395 396 397 397 399 399 399 400 400 401	 XIV. SYSTEMS INTEGRATION AND SUPPORT STRUCTURE 1. Introduction 1.1. Contents 1.2. Objectives 2. Design optimization considerations 2.1. Alternative machine topologies 2.2. Vacuum/atmosphere boundary 2.3. Reference concepts 2.3.1. USA suggestions 	439 439 439 439 440 440 441 443 443
395 396 397 399 399 399 400 400 400 401	 XIV. SYSTEMS INTEGRATION AND SUPPORT STRUCTURE 1. Introduction 1.1. Contents 1.2. Objectives 2. Design optimization considerations 2.1. Alternative machine topologies 2.2. Vacuum/atmosphere boundary 2.3. Reference concepts 2.3.1. USA suggestions 2.3.2. European Community suggestions 	439 439 439 439 440 440 441 443 443 443
395 396 397 399 399 399 400 400 400 401 401	 XIV. SYSTEMS INTEGRATION AND SUPPORT STRUCTURE 1. Introduction 1.1. Contents 1.2. Objectives 2. Design optimization considerations 2.1. Alternative machine topologies 2.2. Vacuum/atmosphere boundary 2.3. Reference concepts 2.3.1. USA suggestions 2.3.2. European Community suggestions 2.3.3. Japanese suggestions 	439 439 439 439 440 440 441 443 443 445 447
395 396 397 399 399 399 400 400 401 401 401 401 401 402	 XIV. SYSTEMS INTEGRATION AND SUPPORT STRUCTURE 1. Introduction 1.1. Contents 1.2. Objectives 2. Design optimization considerations 2.1. Alternative machine topologies 2.2. Vacuum/atmosphere boundary 2.3. Reference concepts 2.3.1. USA suggestions 2.3.2. European Community suggestions 2.3.3. Japanese suggestions 2.3.4. USSR suggestions 	439 439 439 439 440 440 441 443 443 445 447 447
395 396 397 399 399 399 400 400 401 401 401 401 401 401 401 401 401 401 401 401 401 401 402	XIV. SYSTEMS INTEGRATION AND SUPPORT STRUCTURE 1. Introduction 1.1. Contents 1.2. Objectives 2. Design optimization considerations 2.1. Alternative machine topologies 2.2. Vacuum/atmosphere boundary 2.3. Reference concepts 2.3.1. USA suggestions 2.3.2. European Community suggestions 2.3.3. Japanese suggestions 2.3.4. USSR suggestions	439 439 439 439 440 440 441 443 443 445 447 447 447
395 396 397 399 399 399 400 400 401 401 401 401 401 401 401 401 401 401 401 401 402 402	 XIV. SYSTEMS INTEGRATION AND SUPPORT STRUCTURE Introduction 1.1. Contents 1.2. Objectives 2. Design optimization considerations 2.1. Alternative machine topologies 2.2. Vacuum/atmosphere boundary 2.3. Reference concepts 2.3.1. USA suggestions 2.3.2. European Community suggestions 2.3.3. Japanese suggestions 2.3.4. USSR suggestions 3. System interfaces and interactions 	439 439 439 440 440 440 440 441 443 443 445 447 450 450
395 396 397 399 399 399 399 400 400 401 401 401 401 401 401 401 401 401 402 402 402 402	 XIV. SYSTEMS INTEGRATION AND SUPPORT STRUCTURE Introduction 1.1. Contents 1.2. Objectives 2. Design optimization considerations 2.1. Alternative machine topologies 2.2. Vacuum/atmosphere boundary 2.3. Reference concepts 2.3.1. USA suggestions 2.3.2. European Community suggestions 2.3.3. Japanese suggestions 2.3.4. USSR suggestions 3. System interfaces and interactions 3.1. The main INTOR sizes 3.2. Specification of main INTOR systems and subsystems 	439 439 439 439 440 440 440 441 443 443 443 445 447 450 450 450
395 396 397 399 399 399 400 400 401 401 401 401 401 401 401 401 401 401 402 402 402 402 402 402 402 403 40402	 XIV. SYSTEMS INTEGRATION AND SUPPORT STRUCTURE Introduction 1.1. Contents 1.2. Objectives 2. Design optimization considerations 2.1. Alternative machine topologies 2.2. Vacuum/atmosphere boundary 2.3. Reference concepts 2.3.1. USA suggestions 2.3.2. European Community suggestions 2.3.3. Japanese suggestions 2.3.4. USSR suggestions 3. System interfaces and interactions 3.1. The main INTOR sizes 3.3. Interface chart 	439 439 439 439 440 440 440 440 441 443 443 443 445 447 450 450 450
395 396 397 399 399 399 399 400 400 401 401 401 401 401 401 401 401 402 402 402 402 402 402 404	 XIV. SYSTEMS INTEGRATION AND SUPPORT STRUCTURE Introduction 1.1. Contents 1.2. Objectives 2. Design optimization considerations 2.1. Alternative machine topologies 2.2. Vacuum/atmosphere boundary 2.3. Reference concepts 2.3.1. USA suggestions 2.3.2. European Community suggestions 2.3.3. Japanese suggestions 2.3.4. USSR suggestions 3. System interfaces and interactions 3.1. The main INTOR sizes 3.3. Interface chart 	439 439 439 439 440 440 440 440 440 441 443 443 443 445 447 450 450 454 454
395 396 397 399 399 399 399 400 400 401 401 401 401 401 401 401 402 402 402 402 402 402 404	 XIV. SYSTEMS INTEGRATION AND SUPPORT STRUCTURE Introduction 1.1. Contents 1.2. Objectives 2. Design optimization considerations 2.1. Alternative machine topologies 2.2. Vacuum/atmosphere boundary 2.3. Reference concepts 2.3.1. USA suggestions 2.3.2. European Community suggestions 2.3.3. Japanese suggestions 2.3.4. USSR suggestions 3. System interfaces and interactions 3.1. The main INTOR sizes 3.2. Specification of main INTOR systems and subsystems 3.3. Interface chart 4. System loading interactions and responses 	439 439 439 440 440 440 440 440 440 441 443 443 445 450 450 454 454 454
395 396 397 399 399 399 399 400 400 401 401 401 401 401 401 402 402 402 402 402 404 405	 XIV. SYSTEMS INTEGRATION AND SUPPORT STRUCTURE 1. Introduction 1.1. Contents 1.2. Objectives 2. Design optimization considerations 2.1. Alternative machine topologies 2.2. Vacuum/atmosphere boundary 2.3. Reference concepts 2.3.1. USA suggestions 2.3.2. European Community suggestions 2.3.3. Japanese suggestions 2.3.4. USSR suggestions 3. System interfaces and interactions 3.1. The main INTOR sizes 3.2. Specification of main INTOR systems and subsystems 3.3. Interface chart 4. System loading interactions and responses 	439 439 439 439 440 440 440 440 440 440 441 443 443 445 454 454 454 454
395 396 397 399 399 399 399 400 400 401 401 401 401 401 401 402 402 402 402 402 402 402 402 402 403 404 405 405	 XIV. SYSTEMS INTEGRATION AND SUPPORT STRUCTURE 1. Introduction 1.1. Contents 1.2. Objectives 2. Design optimization considerations 2.1. Alternative machine topologies 2.2. Vacuum/atmosphere boundary 2.3. Reference concepts 2.3.1. USA suggestions 2.3.2. European Community suggestions 2.3.4. USSR suggestions 3. System interfaces and interactions 3.1. The main INTOR sizes 3.2. Specification of main INTOR systems and subsystems 3.3. Interface chart 4.1. System loading interactions and responses 5. Design standards 	439 439 439 439 440 440 440 440 440 440 441 443 443 445 450 450 454 454 458 458 458
395 396 397 399 399 399 399 400 400 401 401 401 401 401 401 401 402 402 402 402 402 402 402 404 404 405 405 405	 XIV. SYSTEMS INTEGRATION AND SUPPORT STRUCTURE 1. Introduction 1.1. Contents 1.2. Objectives 2. Design optimization considerations 2.1. Alternative machine topologies 2.2. Vacuum/atmosphere boundary 2.3. Reference concepts 2.3.1. USA suggestions 2.3.2. European Community suggestions 2.3.3. Japanese suggestions 2.3.4. USSR suggestions 3.5 System interfaces and interactions 3.1. The main INTOR sizes 3.2. Specification of main INTOR systems and subsystems 3.3. Interface chart 4. Structure 4.1. System loading interactions and responses 5. Design standards 6. Test facilities and diagnostics 	439 439 439 439 440 440 440 440 440 440 440 441 443 443 445 454 454 458 458 458 458
$\begin{array}{cccccccccccccccccccccccccccccccccccc$	 XIV. SYSTEMS INTEGRATION AND SUPPORT STRUCTURE 1. Introduction 1.1. Contents 1.2. Objectives 2. Design optimization considerations 2.1. Alternative machine topologies 2.2. Vacuum/atmosphere boundary 2.3. Reference concepts 2.3.1. USA suggestions 2.3.2. European Community suggestions 2.3.3. Japanese suggestions 2.3.4. USSR suggestions 3. System interfaces and interactions 3.1. The main INTOR sizes 3.2. Specification of main INTOR systems and subsystems 3.3. Interface chart 4. Structure 4.1. System loading interactions and responses 5. Design standards 6. Test facilities and diagnostics 7. Critical issues 8 B and D requirements 	439 439 439 439 440 440 440 440 440 440 441 443 443 445 454 454 458 458 459 459 450 459 459
395 396 397 399 399 399 399 400 400 401 401 401 401 402 402 402 403 404 405 405 408 409	 XIV. SYSTEMS INTEGRATION AND SUPPORT STRUCTURE 1. Introduction 1.1. Contents 1.2. Objectives 2. Design optimization considerations 2.1. Alternative machine topologies 2.2. Vacuum/atmosphere boundary 2.3. Reference concepts 2.3.1. USA suggestions 2.3.2. European Community suggestions 2.3.3. Japanese suggestions 2.3.4. USSR suggestions 3. System interfaces and interactions 3.1. The main INTOR sizes 3.2. Specification of main INTOR systems and subsystems 3.3. Interface chart 4. Structure 4.1. System loading interactions and responses 5. Design standards 6. Test facilities and diagnostics 7. Critical issues 8. R and D requirements 	439 439 439 439 440 440 440 440 440 440 441 443 443 445 454 454 458 458 458 458 458 459 460 460
395 396 397 399 399 399 399 400 400 401 401 401 401 401 402 402 402 402 402 402 402 402 402 403 404 405 405 405 408 409	 XIV. SYSTEMS INTEGRATION AND SUPPORT STRUCTURE 1. Introduction 1.1. Contents 1.2. Objectives 2. Design optimization considerations 2.1. Alternative machine topologies 2.2. Vacuum/atmosphere boundary 2.3. Reference concepts 2.3.1. USA suggestions 2.3.2. European Community suggestions 2.3.3. Japanese suggestions 2.3.4. USSR suggestions 3.5 System interfaces and interactions 3.1. The main INTOR sizes 3.2. Specification of main INTOR systems and subsystems 3.3. Interface chart 4. Structure 4.1. System loading interactions and responses 5. Design standards 6. Test facilities and diagnostics 7. Critical issues 8. R and D requirements 9. Summary 	439

XV	. ASSEMBLY AND REMOTE MAINTENANCE	463	XVI. RADIATION SHIELDING AND I
1.	Introduction	463
2.	Objectives	463	I. Introduction
3.	Implications of remote maintenance for INTOR	465	2. Purposes of shielding
	3.1. Remote maintenance as a requirement of machine design		3. The importance of personnel access
	3.2. Procedures for remote maintenance	465	4. Assessment of primary shield
	3.3. Maintenance methods	466	4.1. Allowable dose at magnet
	3.4. Mock-ups for remote maintenance	466	4.2. Composition and thickness of in
	3.5. Facilities for remote maintenance	467	4.3. Composition and thickness of o
	3.6. Major systems recommendations	468	4.4. Radiation streaming and addition
	3.6.1. First wall (if separate from the blanket)	468	4.5. Radiation protection of other re
	3.6.2. Blanket maintenance	469	5. Assessment of shielding for personne
	3.6.3. Vacuum vessel	470	5.1. Radiation limits and regulation
	3.6.4. TF coils	471	5.2. Limitations on the physical loca
	3.6.5. PF coils	472	presence of a maintenance work
	3.6.6. Shield	472	5.3. Maintenance procedures for rea
	3.6.7. Vacuum system	472	5.4. Source of radiation exposure du
	3.7. Transport facilities	472	6. Other implications of personnel acce
4.	Failure frequency and availability assessments	473	6.1. Impact of tritium on personnel
	4.1. Introduction	473	6.2. Impact of air activation (^{41}A) or
	4.2. Summary of USA assessment	473	7. Assessment of biological shield
	4.2.1. Approach to availability assessment	474	8. Nuclear data and codes for shielding
	4.2.2. Design assumptions	475	9. Conclusions
	4.2.3. Operating assumptions		10. R and D needs assessment
	4.2.4. Weekly maintenance activities	476	References to Chapter XVI
	4.2.5. Quarterly maintenance activities	476
	4.2.6. Bottoms-up estimate of forced outage frequencies and times	477
	4.2.7. Manpower requirements	479	XVII. VACUUM
	4.2.8. Requirements for 50% availability	479	1. Introduction
	4.2.9. Alternative operating scenario for 50% availability	481	2. Vacuum boundary location
	4.3. Summary of USSR assessment	481	2.1. Vacuum boundary at the first w
	4.4. Impact of accidents on maintenance systems	483	2.2. Vacuum boundary at the back of
5.	Assembly	483	2.3. Vacuum boundary at the buildi
	5.1. Introduction	483	2.4. Data base for large vacuum syst
	5.2. Objectives of machine assembly plan	484	2.5. Conclusions
	5.3. Facility requirements	484	3. Vacuum system (VS) of the reactor (
	5.4. Machine layouts	485	3.1. Effects of pumping different ga
	5.5. Placement tolerances and design features	485	3.2. Methods of cleaning the first w
6.	Major research and development requirements	486	4. Vacuum requirements for plasma hea
	6.1. Development of remote handling systems	486	4.1. Neutral beam injection
	6.2. INTOR reactor mock-ups	486	4.2. RF heating
	6.3. Welding with manipulator systems		5. Superconducting magnet cryostat va
	6.4. Viewing systems for remote welding		6. Tritium and other technological facil
	6.5 Component reliability	488	7. Pumping of helium
	one component tenuenty management of the second sec	400

105	XVI RADIATION SHIELDING AND PERSONNEL ACCESS
463
463	1. Introduction
465	2. Purposes of shielding
465	3. The importance of personnel access
465	4. Assessment of primary shield
466	4.1. Allowable dose at magnet
466	4.2. Composition and thickness of inboard shield
467	4.3. Composition and thickness of outboard shield
468	4.4. Radiation streaming and additional shield requirements
468	4.5. Radiation protection of other reactor components
469	5. Assessment of shielding for personnel access
470	5.1. Radiation limits and regulation
471	5.2. Limitations on the physical location and time duration for the
472	presence of a maintenance worker
	5.3. Maintenance procedures for reactor components, including time schedule 50
472	5.4. Source of radiation exposure during maintenance work after shutdown
472	6. Other implications of personnel access
473	6.1. Impact of tritium on personnel access
473	6.2. Impact of air activation (⁴¹ A) on personnel access
473	7. Assessment of biological shield
A7A	8. Nuclear data and codes for shielding design
-	9. Conclusions
4/J 176	10. R and D needs assessment
470	References to Chapter XVI
4/0

Λ.V	II. VACUUM	507
1.	Introduction
2.	Vacuum boundary location
	2.1. Vacuum boundary at the first wall
	2.2. Vacuum boundary at the back of the shield, inside the TF coils
	2.3. Vacuum boundary at the building wall
	2.4. Data base for large vacuum systems of today
	2.5. Conclusions
3.	Vacuum system (VS) of the reactor (toroidal chamber)
	3.1. Effects of pumping different gases
	3.2. Methods of cleaning the first wall
4.	Vacuum requirements for plasma heating equipment
	4.1. Neutral beam injection
	4.2. RF heating	520
5.	Superconducting magnet cryostat vacuum system	520
6.	Tritium and other technological facilities vacuum system
7.	Pumping of helium
8.	Radiation effects on vacuum systems	524
	8.1. Cryopanels	524
	8.2. Seals	525
	8.3. Valves	526
	8.4. Other materials	526
	8.5. Effects of tritium
	1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6. 7. 8.	 Introduction

9.	Remot	e leak detection and repair	526
	9.1. D	engir of leaks	520
10	Cryon	imp regeneration	528
10.	The eff	facts of a catastronhic first wall/vacuum wall failure on the INTOR	520
11.	vacuun	n system	530
12.	Leakag	e into the vacuum system	530
	12.1.	Maximum permitted leak	530
	12.2.	Probability of leaks	531
13.	Minimi	izing chamber evacuation time	532
14.	Summa	ary	533
15.	R and	D needs assessment	535
Ref	erences t	to Chapter XVII	535
		•
XV	III. DIA	GNOSTICS, DATA ACQUISITION AND CONTROL	537
1.	Introdu	uction	537
2.	Impact	of general features of INTOR	538
3.	Contro	l and data processing system	539
	3.1. G	eneral configuration	539
	3.2. D	ata processing	540
	3.3. F	eedback control	542
	3.4. So	ome remarks	542
4.	Instrum	nentation	543
	4.1. Pl	lasma diagnostics	545
	4.2. E	ngineering instrumentation	547
5.	Access	to the tokamak torus	547
6.	Physica	al environment of instrumentation	551
7.	Safety	system and reliability	552
8.	R and	D requirements	555
9.	Conclu	sions and recommendations	556
Ref	erences t	to Chapter XVIII	558
VIV	7 SAE	TETY AND ENVIRONMENT	550
ЛІЛ	. JAI		557
1.	Introdu	uction and summary	559
	1.1. G	eneral discussion of INTOR safety issues	559
	1.2. Su	ummary of data base assessment	561
2.	Safety	and environmental protection regulations appropriate to INTOR	563
	2.1.	Licensing requirements	563
		2.1.1. European requirements	563
		2.1.2. United States requirements	564
		2.1.3. USSR requirements	564
	2.2.	Release of activation products	564
		2.2.1. European requirements	564
	2.2	2.2.2. United States requirements	303 ·
	2.3.	Release of triffium	505
		2.3.1. General considerations of thitium	560
		2.3.2. Other sources of tritium in the environment	208 569
		2.3.5. Environmental benaviour of tritium	500
		2.3.4. European requirements	207

		2.3.5. Japanese comments	569
		2.3.6. Comments from the IAEA perspective	569
		2.3.7. United States requirements	574
		2.4. Radiation exposure of operating personnel and of the general public	575
		2.4.1. United States requirements	575
		2.4.2. European regulations	578
		2.4.3. USSR requirements	580
		2.5. Other hazardous materials	581
		2.6. Designing for natural phenomena	581
		2.7. Other environmental impacts	584
		2.7.1. The situation in the United States	584
		2.8. Magnetic field exposures	585
		2.9. Nonionizing radiation effects	585
		2.10. Summary	586
	3.	Safety-related design criteria and standards	587
		3.1. General design criteria for nuclear plants in the United States	587
		3.2. Quality assurance standards for fusion reactors	587
		3.3. Criteria for protection systems	595
		3.4. Fusion-specific guides and standards	595
		3.5. Safety analyses in Japan	596
	4.	Accident analysis	596
		4.1. Accident definition	596
		4.2. Tritium release	597
		4.3. Activation product release	599
		4.4. Fires and explosions	605
		4.5. Release of toxic materials	605
		4.6. Electrical system accidents	607
		4.7. Magnet system failures	607
		4.8. Water coolant system failures	608
		4.9. Helium coolant system failures	608
	5.	Containment requirements	608
		5.1. Introduction	608
		5.2. Containment under normal operating conditions	610
		5.3. Containment under accident conditions	611
•		5.4. Explosive containment requirements	612
	6.	Tritium safeguards requirements	613
		6.1. European Community requirements	613
		6.2. United States requirements	613
	7.	R and D needs assessment	615
	8.	Conclusions	616
	Refe	rences to Chapter XIX	617

APPENDICES

A.1. INTOR Workshop sessions and attendees	619
A.2. INTOR home base organizations	620
A.2.1. EC (Euratom) INTOR Workshop teams	620
A.2.2. Japan INTOR Workshop teams	624
A.2.3. USSR INTOR Workshop teams	629
A.2.4. US INTOR Workshop teams	633

A.3. Previous tokamak reactor design parameters

ctor design parameters	638
eters	645
ation for the INTOR Workshop	648
•	