

Contents

Timeline	ix
Annual Average Exchange Rates	xiv
Acronyms and Abbreviations	xv
Introduction	1
Consequences of the nuclear crisis: agriculture, fisheries	8
Consequences of the nuclear crisis: Fukushima residents	11
Consequences of the nuclear crisis: Fukushima Daiichi workers	12
‘Information-sharing’ is not a buzz-word in government agencies	14
Institutional reforms postponed	15
Fukushima Daiichi Nuclear Power Plant: an impending disaster	17
Where does the buck stop?	20
The same old story	23
The routes to responsibility	25
Perceptions of Japan Inc.: busting myths	25
1 Independent Administrative Institutions: In Name Only	28
The push for reforms: the perfect opportunity	31
Reforms according to Koizumi: FILP	35
Reforms according to Koizumi: enthusiastic support from the opposition	36
The privatization of the Japan Highway Corporation: unenthusiastic support from the LDP and the ministries	38
Special Corporations: consequences of amakudari	40
The liquidation of a failed Special Corporation: Government Housing and Loan Guarantee Corporation	41
The image of reform: Urban Development Corporation	42
The image of reform: Japan National Oil Corporation	42
The image of reform: Japan External Trade Organization	43
Manipulation of operations to maintain JETRO	44
The disguise: convincing the Japanese media	46
The disguise: convincing the American media	48
The disguise: convincing Koizumi	48
JETRO’s ‘core focus’: sowing the seeds of the ministry	49
Holding on to a good thing	50

2	Amakudari in the Ministries' IAIs, Public Corporations, Research Institutes and Affiliated Agencies: the Insidious Side	52	5	The DNA of Japan's Post-war Political System: Ultra-conservative to the Core	108
	No reforms in sight	54		The '1955 system': the moneymen, Nobusuke Kishi/Kakuei Tanaka (1950–76)	112
	Manifestations of amakudari : IAI/public corporations	56		Nobusuke Kishi	112
	Issues arising in research institutes	58		Kakuei Tanaka: the godfather of pork-barrel patronage	114
	A consequence of amakudari in IAIs: bid-rigging	60		Shin Kanemaru: post-Tanaka moneyman	117
	A consequence of amakudari in an IAI: incompetent management of the Social Insurance Agency	61		Right-wing ultra-conservative politics: in the family domain	119
	Scandal and super- amakudari in a government corporation: Japan Post	65		Junichiro Koizumi	119
	Everything old is new again	69		Shinzo Abe	120
3	'Information-Sharing' is Not a Buzz-Word in Japan: Press Clubs Insulate an Insular Political Economy	71		Yasuo Fukuda	123
	Press clubs: information cartels control the flow of information	72		Taro Aso	124
	The whole truth and nothing but the truth	76		Yukio Hatoyama	126
	Press clubs and Japan Inc.	78		Ichiro Ozawa: protégé of Tanaka and Kanemaru	127
4	Elements Intrinsic to Japan's Political Economy: Interlocking Interests between an Elite Bureaucracy and Big Business	79		The Recruit scandal: interpersonal networks of politicians, bureaucrats and big business	130
	Power struggle between politicians and bureaucrats	81		The Ministry of Defense scandal: interpersonal networks of politicians, bureaucrats and big business	132
	The origins of the power of the bureaucracy and government links with big business	84		The right-wing ultraconservative mind-set continues
	The bureaucracy's power defined	87		Yoshihiko Noda (30 August 2011–)	136
	Collaboration between the bureaucracy and big business: ministerial guidance and mercantilism (1898–1919)	88		Seiji Maehara	137
	Japan's expansion in East Asia, outward investment and the benefits to big business	89		Shintaro Ishihara: post-earthquake neo-nationalism	139
	Recession: the Ministry of Commerce and Industry and industrial rationalization	92		Ishihara's ardent admirers: Toru Hashimoto and the Osaka Restoration Group	141
	The alliance between MCI and big business: the birth of 'administrative guidance'	94	6	Pork-Barrel Patronage in the Prefectures: the Proliferation of Nuclear Power Plants	143
	The Manchurian Incident	95		Pushing nuclear in needy prefectures	147
	The Second World War: the intensification of ministerial powers	97		Fukushima Prefecture	150
	Enduring changes: corporate culture	98		Aomori Prefecture	151
	Reverse reforms and Japan Inc.	98		Aomori's no. 1 industry: nuclear power	152
	Small shock, big shock: nuclear energy as a national priority	103		The princes of pork-barrel patronage: Kakuei Tanaka and Noboru Takeshita	157
	Mechanisms to implement guidance	103		The godfather	157
				The Kashiwazaki-Kariwa Nuclear Power Plant: the art of pork-barrel patronage	159
				The town that can't say 'no!'	161
				Noboru Takeshita: bringing home the bacon	163
				Shimane Nuclear Power Plant: public works perpetuate more public works	165
				Ehime Prefecture: the Takeshita connection	165

Kato's connections to MEXT and METI: textbook and MOX	168
Ikata Nuclear Power Plant: money, money, money	169
The price of pork-barrel patronage	170
The power of money	172
The power of the state	175
7 Japan's Nuclear Crisis: the Routes to Responsibility	180
JOYO and FUGEN: trial and error	182
MONJU: more trials and errors	182
Mihama: still more errors	184
Takahama: more errors but more MOX	185
Tokai-mura	185
The blame game	187
Splitting NISA from METI: the image of reform	190
NISA: the tip of METI's nuclear tail	192
METI's nuclear progeny: IAIs, industrial associations and research institutes	193
The end of the line: IAIs, at the very heart of government	194
METI: the creative ministry: the route to the renewable energy industrial sector	196
Don't blame the bureaucrats, blame the system!	197
8 The Japan System: Indestructible but Destructive	199
Japan's first 'lost decade'	200
The first 'lost decade': institutional paralysis	201
Japan's second lost decade: institutional paralysis	202
Earthquake-tsunami and nuclear crisis: impact on industrial production	205
Impact on sovereign debt: out-of-sight, out-of-mind	210
Political bickering: impact on rapid recovery	212
Too little too late?	214
Japan Inc. is alive and well	218
Back to basics: a variation on the '1955' theme	219
 Notes	 223
Select Bibliography	234
Index	236